IF you're looking for a slice of luxury in the New Zealand wilderness, Treetops Lodge and Estate – near Rotorua, on the North Island – is just the ticket. With only eight villa suites and four lodge suites, Treetops is set in 1,000 hectares of pristine, private forest with terrific walks, sailing, kayaking, horse-riding, archery, mountain-biking, helicopter charters, abseiling, 4WD safaris, and some of the best trout fishing in the country. The slate-and-timber lodge is a five-star retreat, with roaring log fires, leather lounges, a library, gourmet food and fine local wines. It's represented here by Destination Marketing Services, (02) 9368 1811, www.treetops.co.nz
